

Aviva Risk Management Solutions: 2021 update

The pandemic has seen many changes in the way businesses operate, driven by the need to protect their future. These changes bring in new risks that need to be understood and managed at a rapid pace. In 2021, our focus remains on protecting key assets – our people, our property and our business resilience.

Support during lockdown 3.0

Understanding how the business of both you and your clients will operate safely during the current lockdown, while coping with the demands that this time of year brings, has never been more important. Our support through the coming months includes:

Current evolving risks

Cyber – we’re seeing an increased level of attacks as criminals take advantage of disruption and remote working practices.

Homeworking – employers remain liable for health and safety, mental health and wellbeing.

Back to work – businesses need to pay close attention to training and safety measures needed to establish Covid-secure working conditions.

Supply chain – global disruption, lockdown, stockpiling and lack of parts are all factors to consider in a business’ supply chain exposure.

Changing business models – new hazards and new dependencies introduced by the pandemic need managing.

Economic issues – increased insolvency, lack of funding and job losses may result in a reduction in risk management focus and maintenance. Could this lead to an increase in civil commotion, malicious damage and arson?
